

Computer Drafting Room Gets Make Over

Thanks to a significant gift from an alumnus, the Computer Drafting Room on the third floor of LeTellier Hall received a complete make over this year. As you may remember, all civil engineering students are required to take drawing in the second semester of their freshman year. Also, many of you recall “hunkering” over your drawings for hours on end and feeling the neck aches and backaches the next day. This is history. The Class of 2008 arrived to find a new environment in which to learn. As seen in the pictures below, we replaced the drafting tables, stools, and limited drawing surfaces with large working desks, CPUs hung underneath, and comfortable chairs.

The School of Engineering is grateful to its alumni for these types of gifts that allow Citadel engineering students the opportunity to exceed.
